MISSION AND DESCRIPTION:

Institution Mission Statement:

“WISR provides community-involved adults with high-quality, personalized, learner-centered online and/or onsite graduate education and degrees in a collaborative, multicultural learning community. WISR engages in community education, with a commitment to action-oriented inquiry that combines theory and practice to achieve community improvement and social justice.”

Areas of Special Focus: WISR offers interdisciplinary academic degrees in Education and Community Leadership (MS Degree), an EdD in Higher Education and Social Change, and a professional Master’s in Psychology, specifically designed (and approved) to meet the State of California’s academic requirements for the MFT (Marriage and Family Therapy) and LPCC (Licensed Professional Clinical Counselor) licenses.

Description of Institution: WISR provides personalized, learner-centered opportunities to pursue academic degrees, offering distance learning and on-site learning options to all of its students. WISR is a multicultural learning community welcoming people of all backgrounds and views.

Student Demographic Profile: The majority of WISR students are over 35, and with students ranging in age from their early 20s to 80. Many WISR students live in the San Francisco Bay Area, but a large minority live in other areas, mostly in Central and Southern California, and not currently, but sometimes in other states or countries. Students are from a variety of ethnic backgrounds, including for example, African American, Latinx, Asian American, Native American, European American, Arab American, and recent immigrants. Most are employed and engaged in studies related to their current area of employment, but a significant number are either making a transition to a new career field, or concerned primarily not with employment but with further their own learning and/or making valuable contributions to their communities. Students represent a range of religious orientations, sexual orientations and gender identities.

Courses/Programs/Degrees: WISR offers courses and entire degree programs in the following areas: BS in Community Leadership and Justice, MS in Education and Community Leadership, MS in Psychology (MFT, LPCC), and EdD in Higher Education and Social Change.
